THE RAYS IN "A HOT OLD TIME."
The last times the mirth-provoking Rays will be seen in "A Hot Old Time" takes place with the engagement which opens at the Grand Opera House this evening. These popular playes and their popular play have delighted thousands of theater-goers from Maine to California, from Winnipeg to the Guif. No funnier creation than the Larry Mooney of Mr. Ray has been introduced on the stage in years. As an eccentric characterization it will hold a conspicuous place in stage history.

New scepery and new electrical effects have been added to the play for this farewell tour, and, moreover, the organization in every detail comes to New Haven in better shape than ever before. All the old farest the coverance within a print of the coverance within and the new gel being called down from heaven to overcome such a wretch. as the patron saint of France, and said that it was he who, as the stories have it, appeared to Joan of Arc. Rev. Dr. Baker then quoted from Michelet's fascinating "Life of Joan of Arc," showing how St. Michael is declared to have appeared to her. The preacher said that in ast St. Michael was always portrayed as being young and beautiful, and as the "Lord of Souls" he was al-ways represented as unarmed. When introduced in the pictures of the Madonna and Child he presents the bal-ance to Christ, who seems to welcome the happy soul. "In literature," the preacher said, "outside of the Bible, St. Michael is made forever famous by the part he is made to take in Milton's immortal poem "Paradise Lost." As a conclusion of his sermon Rev. Dr. Baker said: "The tradition of St. Michael struggling with and finally triumphing ancient yet also a most modern truth. that of the Greek church and Greek fathers, being dominated by the teach-

LNTERTAINMENTS. JULIA MARLOWE AT THE HYPERION TO-NIGIVT.

Mary Tudor, princess of England, second daughter of Henry VII. and sister of Henry VIII., figures in several of the historical romances of the seventeenth century. In these impassioned novels she is described as possessing all the charms and virtues of womanhood. One biographer, speaking of her eyes, says: "Though her eyes were not the greatest, yet they possessed all that could be desired in the lovellest eyes in the world. They were quick with mildness and so fall of love that with a single gance they durted into the coldest breasts, all the flames that sparkled in themselves." It is this celebrated lady whom Jalia Marlowe will present at the Hyperion theater this evening. The princess has been transported into the domain of the drama from the pages of Charles Major's novel, "When Knighthood Was in F ower." Paul Kester has wrought the story into a four-act pluy, the scenes of which are laid amid parks, courtyards, taverns and palace interiors in England and France during the years 1013-Hyperion Theater.

"THE HOUSE THAT JACK BUILT."
"The House That Jack Built." the latest of George H. Broadhurst's musical comedy successes, comes to the Grand Opera House on Thursday evening with the strongest possible recommendation from Chicago, Boston and other cities, where the piece scored an immediate and pronounced success. The company collect ed to produce the play at the Grand Opera House includes several clever farceurs and general favorites, each one also appearing in novel and first-class specialities.
